Translator. This collection contains the personal and professional papers of Howard Goldblatt, an American translator of Chinese literature including the works of Nobel Prize in Literature winner Mo Yan. The papers contain Goldblatt’s correspondence with authors, editors, and publishing houses from across Mainland China, Taiwan, and elsewhere; drafts of Goldblatt’s many translations; and notes created during his translation work. Goldblatt’s personal library of over 7,000 volumes is also held by the Chinese Literature Translation Archive.

Biographical Note:
As one of America’s most prolific and influential translators of any language, Howard Goldblatt (葛浩文, born 1939) has introduced generations of English readers to a wide spectrum of contemporary Chinese-language literature and brought translated Chinese literature from the confines of academia into the mainstream. With nearly 50 translations of novels, memoirs, and a major anthology of poetry, Goldblatt’s translations have been reviewed by the most prestigious magazines, newspapers, online media outlets, and by literary giants like John Updike, among others. He is the only official English-language translator of novelist Mo Yan, who won the Nobel Prize in literature.

The Howard Goldblatt Papers are available for research at Bizzell Memorial Library’s 5th Floor Special Collections.
